TONY KELLY

Born 1975 in Dublin, the Irish man Tony Kelly leaves his hometown early to devote his creative photography to war coverage. After eight years as photo journalist Tony Kelly moves towards a completely different world – he starts photographing for the biggest fashion companies and brands worldwide and passionately dedicates his work to fine arts photography.

He successfully develops his creative identity and celebrates prolific success around the world. As part of his photographic career, Tony Kelly cultivates his particular intuition for places and people. A quality that is strongly reflected in his artworks: exaggerated, colourful and humorous depictions of pop culture. His style reminds the viewer of the world of Instagram with a more iconic approach, moreover strongly distinguished by pose and character of his artworks.

„I think Instagram is an industry in itself and I think it's very important to the future of photography“

Tony Kelly currently lives and works in Paris and Los Angeles. Both places brilliantly match his aesthetic journey, which over the years took him to places like Brasil, Africa and the Middle East. His unique and quirky Irish view of cultural aspirations and characteristics is part of his distinctive artistic style.
