TONY KELLY

Tony Kelly is one of the most influential fine art photographers of our times. With his unique visual language he is often referred to as a modern-day Helmut Newton.

A riot of colour, a lick of gloss and a touch of irony leads the viewer into the sunshine-drenched, palm tree-filled world of Tony Kelly. He plays with humor and provocation and although highly polished, his work is playfully subversive which forces you to stop and think, inviting us to venture beneath the glossy veneer and confront stereotypes, taboos and role reversals.

„My aesthetic is fun, colourful, vibrant and sexy. In terms of maintaining authorship, it's a very natural process. If you're true to yourself and your ideas, the rest takes care of itself.“
Tony Kelly always delivers a dash of self-irony to the naked skin and tells a story.

From resplendent panoramas or cinematic, glamorously staged moments, Drebin always tackles big emotions like humour, love and sex.
